Notes From Jane & Lloyd

Here we are again, at the start of a brand new year. In preparing to write this, we always go back to see what we talked about in previous issues of this newsletter. It was in our Spring 2008 issue that we first talked about the collapsing economy, and a reminder that typically, when the economy declines, crime increases.

Unfortunately, this is exactly what has happened. We are seeing more and more burglaries, both residential and commercial. And the burglars seem to be more brazen; sometimes ignoring the signs and decals warning that a building is alarmed.

That is why we recommend that you use your alarm system every day. Don't just arm it when you leave the house, use your "stay" mode arming at night. Or don't just use it when you go out of town, it should be armed anytime you are away, even if just for a 20 minute trip to the corner store.

Also, think about joining (or starting) a Neighborhood Watch group in your community. The last thing that criminals want is more eyes and ears that might catch them in action.

The economy is starting to show some glimmers of recovery, let's all wish for a new year that will allow us all to prosper.

*Have a Happy New Year,
Jane & Lloyd Silverstein
